

26th Feb 11

Dear David,

Thanks for yours.

Itank and aft that too. G is being toppled since hugging Blair, the US and surrendering his nuclear programme, fearing a fascist western attack after the illegal invasion of Iraq — ignoring the fact that the US/UK only attacked countries which they knew for certain possessed no weapons of mass destruction!

A friendly gesture to the perfidious greedy west would also have increased CIA activity to destabilise Libya, of course, capitalising upon G's senility/insanity.

When G was the most strident supporter of anti-Zionist/western fascism, and supported the Baader-Meinhof, Galters, the RAF, etc, he maintained his dictatorship for over forty years. He should've stuck to Machiavelli's advice and not changed horses. In fact, when he did hug the west, I hoped his supporters would revolt at such selfish treachery. Wonders what country will give him asylum if he flees — certainly not his new friends in the UK/US!

Perhaps France, which has always supported the Arab world in general with more integrity than Zionist US/UK. Or perhaps he'll seek refuge in the same sub-Saharan states now providing him with mercenaries to kill his own people. Even Idi Amin managed to find sanctuary in the middle east because of his anti-Zionist actions.

Meanwhile the UK students have momentarily got off their knees, over an increase in university fees. Typical, as, after Thatcher/Blair, they all were too busy climbing the property ladder like good serfs, so this recent revolt was probably motivated by mortgage payment considerations! It was also illustrative of our obsequious UK media, to give more coverage to Prince Charles and his where being made late for the opera by rioting students, than to the issues concerned. In the 1960s the names of European student leaders and trade union leaders were allied household words, and the media would not have dared to be so middle-class partisan. Let us hope the middle-classes continue in their, "let them eat cake!" complacency. And that the filthy rich bankers, that caused this latest roasting of the poor, continue to fill their fat bellies happily. I've always believed that those who do nothing but talk, should have nothing — they deserve